staff under the careful direction of the management of the club.

All the actors, girls and boys, were "easy" in their lines, reading their long speeches without hesitation, eatching and responding to their cues promptly and naturally, and, throughout the performance, showing a thorough understanding and comprehension of their parts that reflected great credit upon themselves and gave abundant evidence of the scholarly instruction which they had received.

To Miss Ray Van Vort, head of the department of English of the High School and general manager of the club, should be given the hearty thanks of the community for the very striking results of fier tireless efforts to turn the minds of her charges away from ragtime song and dance to the best in literature and the drama, and to give the public in general the
